BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Ruth Leah Bunzel was born on April 18, 1898 in New York City. Known as “Bunny” by her friends, she attended Barnard College where she received her B.A. in European History in 1918. With no thought of continuing her education, she acquired a job in 1922 as secretary and editorial assistant to Franz Boas at Columbia University. Esther Goldfrank, who had resigned as Boas’s secretary to study anthropology at Columbia, was a friend of one of Bunzel’s sisters.

By 1924 Bunzel, herself, was considering a career in anthropology and wanted to observe an anthropologist at work in the field. Since Boas traveled to Europe every summer, Bunzel decided to spend her vacation that year in Zuni Pueblo, New Mexico as a secretary to Ruth Benedict, who would be collecting Zuni mythology. When she informed Boas of her plan, Boas encouraged her to work on her own research rather than spending her time on secretarial work. He suggested that she study art, specifically potters and their pottery. Elsie Clews Parsons objected to Bunzel (who lacked formal training) conducting her own research in Zuni and threatened to withdraw her financial support of Benedict’s mythology project. With Boas’s firm backing, Parsons eventually relented and Bunzel was allowed to go to Zuni.

That summer, Bunzel arrived in Zuni with papier maché pots she had made for her informants to paint designs on. She observed the potters at work and also made pottery alongside them. After five weeks she felt she had gathered enough information on the Zuni and moved on to study Hopi, San Ildefonso, and Acoma potters. The results of her research would later produce her dissertation, The Pueblo Potter, A Study of Creative Imagination in Primitive Art, published in 1929.

When she returned to New York, she began work on a draft of The Pueblo Potter and in 1925 resigned as Boas’s secretary to become his student at Columbia University. Although she completed her doctoral work and dissertation in 1927, she was not awarded her PhD until 1929 when the The Pueblo Potter was published. (At the time, the university did not confer doctorates until a student’s dissertation had been published.) The Pueblo Potter, a landmark work, was the first anthropological study of art and the individual in culture.

From 1924 to 1929 Bunzel spent several summers and winters in Zuni. Parsons, who had initially opposed her first trip, sponsored Bunzel’s second trip, this time to study ceremonialism, and other trips and projects. Bunzel’s papers on Zuni ceremonialism as well as creation myths, kachinas, and poetry were published in the 47th Annual Report of the Bureau of American Ethnology (1932). Flora Zuni and her family, with whom Bunzel lived when she was in the field, formally adopted her and initiated her into their clan, the Beaver clan. They gave her the Zuni name Maiatitsa, which means “blue bird,” a reference to the blue smock that Bunzel often wore while making pottery. Bunzel’s second Zuni name, Tsatitsa, was given to her by her primary informant and former governor of the pueblo, Nick Tumaka. After a decade long absence, Bunzel returned to Zuni for her last time in 1939 to study child development.

Having studied the Southwest, Bunzel felt it was natural to also study Mexico. During her interview for a Guggenheim Fellowship, however, the chairman of the foundation persuaded her to study Guatemala, instead, as no American anthropologist had done much work in the area. As a result, from 1930 to 1932 she studied the Highland Mayan village of Santo Tomas Chichicastenango. Her work there resulted in Chichicastenango, A Guatemalan Village, published in 1952. From 1936 to 1937 she also did fieldwork in the village of Chamula in Chiapas, Mexico. Her 1940 article “The Role of Alcoholism in Two Central American Communities” was a comparative study of Chichicastenango and Chamula.

During World War II, Bunzel worked in England for the U.S. Government Office of War Information from 1942 to 1945. Having spent some time in Spain during the late 1930s improving her Spanish, she translated broadcasts for Spain as well as incoming broadcasts.

When she returned to New York after the war, she became involved in the Columbia University Research in Contemporary Cultures project [RCC]. Directed by Ruth Benedict and funded by the Office of Naval Research, RCC was composed of research groups, each studying a different culture. From 1947 to 1951, Bunzel led the group studying China, which involved interviewing Chinese immigrants in New York City. The project produced several papers, including her unpublished manuscripts, Explorations in Chinese Culture and An Anthropological Approach to Chinese Communism, which she co-authored with John Hast Weakland.

Early in her career, Bunzel was a lecturer at Barnard College (1929-1930) and at Columbia University (1933-1935, 1937-1940). It was not until 1953 that she was hired as an Adjunct Professor at Columbia. Although the university’s official appointment card lists Bunzel as having retired in 1966, she continued to teach at Columbia University after her retirement.

On January 14, 1990, Bunzel passed away at the age of 91.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The bulk of this collection documents the professional life of Ruth Leah Bunzel from the 1940s to 1970s. The collection contains correspondence, manuscripts, notes, research files, teaching materials, card files, artwork, and sound recordings. A large portion of the collection is comprised of work from the Chinese project that Bunzel led as part of Columbia University Research in Contemporary Cultures [RCC]. The collection also contains her paper for the Bureau of Applied Social Research, "Interviewing in National Character Research" (in which she analyzes the methods used in RCC), as well as materials from two spin-offs of RCC—Studies in Soviet Culture and Studies in Contemporary Cultures. Bunzel's relationship with Columbia University is also represented in the collection through her notes as lecturer and adjunct professor at Columbia University, correspondence with her students, and her students' papers. Among her students was Ethel Cutler Freeman, whose letters and assignments can be found in the collection. There are also memos and other materials documenting the activities of the anthropology department and university, as well as their responses to the 1968 student uprising at Columbia. In addition, the collection contains notes from courses Bunzel took with Franz Boas and Ruth Benedict as a graduate student at Columbia. Other items of significance are the drawings of Hopi and Zuni kachinas that Bunzel collected while in the field in the Southwest and a map of a Tewa village sketched in pencil. The collection does not contain any of her field notes from her work in the Southwest nor from her work in Guatemala or Mexico. Although Bunzel's writings are not well represented in the collection, there are items of interest such as typescript copies of "Tentative Questionnaire for Handbook of Psychological Leads for Ethnological Field Workers: Economics," her handwritten reminiscence of Boas, and drafts of papers she presented at conferences. Also of interest are notes on her memories of the Abram Kardiner psychocultural seminars (in which she was an early participant), notes from various seminars, and two 1963 sound recordings from an Anthropology and World Affairs regional conference. Among her notable correspondents in the collection are David F. Aberle, Franziska Boas, Steve Boggs, Paul Bohannan, Joseph Casagrande, Vincent Crapanzano, Harold Driver, Abe Edel, Raymond Fogelson, Morton H. Fried, Ethel Cutler Freeman, Alexander Lesser, Oscar Lewis, George Marcus, Catharine McClellan, Margaret Mead, Lita Fejos Osmundson, George Spindler, Leslie White, Helene Boas Yampolsky, and Mark Zborowski.

RESTRICTIONS

Materials with student grades were separated and have been restricted. Most of the restricted materials are not open for access until 2030.

EXTENT

13 linear feet (27 boxes & 2 audio reels)

PROVENANCE

These papers were donated to the National Anthropological Archives by Columbia University's Department of Anthropology.

RELATED COLLECTIONS

Other materials relating to Ruth Bunzel at the National Anthropological Archives include kachina drawings in MS 4609 (available to view digitally on SIRIS, the Smithsonian's online catalog); correspondence with the Bureau of American Ethnology in MS 4846 and the Records of the Bureau of American Ethnology; and a photograph of Bunzel in Photographic Lot 92-35.

The Human Studies Film Archive has a video oral history of Bunzel (HSFA 89.10.8) which was created as part of the "History of Anthropology Series" produced by the University of Florida's Department of Anthropology.

PROCESSING NOTE

The papers of Ruth Leah Bunzel were received partially organized. The processing archivist kept existing groupings and arrangement and organized the collection into nine series. Original folder titles were retained with titles assigned by the archivist placed within square brackets.

The processing archivist would like to thank Dr. Bruce Bernstein for providing information about the kachina artwork in this collection.

SERIES DESCRIPTIONS AND CONTAINER LIST

SERIES 1: CORRESPONDENCE. 1957-1977.

5 inches

This series contains Bunzel's general professional correspondence. Folders are organized chronologically with letters within each folder arranged alphabetically by correspondent. A folder of undated correspondence can be found at the end of the series. Among her notable correspondents are David Aberle, Franziska Boas, Steve Boggs, Joseph Casagrande, Harold Driver, Abe Edel, Ethel Cutler Freeman, Catharine McClellan, Margaret Mead, George Spindler, Leslie White, Helene Boas Yampolsky, and Mark Zborowski. A few reviews and articles written by Bunzel can be found in her correspondence with journal editors and publishers. In the folder of undated correspondence is a carbon copy of a letter from Bunzel to Margaret Mead regarding how she came to be an anthropologist. The letter was included in Mead's essay, "Apprenticeship Under Boas" in The Anthropology of Franz Boas: Essays on the Centennial of His Birth. Also of interest are Ethel Cutler Freeman's 1957 manuscript "Seminole Symbolism, a copy of Ruth Landes's grant application (filed under "Jean Morrison" in the folder of 1969 correspondence), and Bunzel's correspondence with Richard and Natalie Woodbury in 1970 regarding the kachina drawings she collected.

Bunzel's correspondence with her students and other Columbia University related letters are in Series 3. Columbia University.

SERIES 2: RESEARCH IN CONTEMPORARY CULTURES. 1947-1954.

4.2 linear feet

The Columbia University Research in Contemporary Cultures [RCC] was organized and directed by Ruth Benedict and funded by the Human Resources Division of the Office of Naval Research in 1947. RCC was organized to develop methods in studying contemporary cultures from a distance. Interdisciplinary groups composed of anthropologists, psychiatrists/clinical psychologists, sociologists, historians, political scientists, students, and other people with interests in cross-cultural problems were formed to study the following cultures: Chinese, Czech, French, Russians, Polish, Syrians, and East European Jewish. To gain more balanced perspectives, an effort was made to have group members that belonged to the culture being studied along with Americans and nationals of other countries. Invited by Benedict to participate in RCC, Bunzel directed the group studying Chinese culture. When Benedict passed away in 1948, Margaret Mead took over as director of RCC until 1951 when the project ended. Offshoots of RCC were created, including Studies of Soviet Culture [SSC] (directed by Mead) and Studies in Contemporary Cultures [SCC] (directed by Rhoda Métraux); both projects were sponsored by the American Museum of Natural History.

Materials from Bunzel's group make up the bulk of this series. These include interviews with Chinese immigrants in New York City, analyses of Chinese literature and movies, and transcripts from the group's seminars. The transcripts of the seminars are interspersed with those of RCC's general meetings. Several of the papers written by the group have been arranged into chapters in the folders following the seminar transcripts; most were not published. Reprints of papers that have been published can be found at the end of Subseries: Chinese Group. Among the papers in Subseries: Chinese Group are drafts of Bunzel's manuscripts Explorations in Chinese Culture and An Anthropological Approach to Chinese Communism, co-authored with John Weakland. Theodora Abel, Jane Belo, Elizabeth Hellersberg, Virginia Heyer Young, Warner Muensterberger, Gitel Poznanski Steed, and John Weakland were some of the members of the group studying China. Their work is represented in this series.

Subseries: General RCC consists of materials from other groups in RCC as well as overviews of the work of RCC. This includes Bunzel's report for the Bureau of Applied Social Research, "Interviewing in National Character Research." The paper, prepared under contract with the Air Research and Development Command at Maxwell Air Force Base, is an analysis of the interview methods used in RCC. At the end of the subseries is a folder of publications by members of RCC based on their work for the project.

Subseries: SSC and SCC contains papers on German and Soviet cultures by members of Studies of Contemporary Cultures and Studies of Soviet Culture.

SERIES 3. COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY. 1925-1941 & 1956-1969.

2 linear feet

This series reflects Bunzel's long relationship with Columbia University as both a graduate student and professor. The series is thus divided into the following two subseries:

Subseries: Student Notes contains Bunzel's notes from classes she took with Franz Boas and Ruth Benedict. Because Bunzel did not identify the professors for all her courses in her notes, Columbia University's course bulletins were used to match Benedict and Boas to the courses they taught. It is worth noting that Bunzel's notes from Benedict's course on Social Organization are dated 1932-1933 although, according to her official student records, Bunzel was enrolled in the course in 1925 and had received her doctorate in 1929.

Subseries: Administrative and Teaching Materials contains materials associated with Bunzel's work as a lecturer and adjunct professor at Columbia University. Bunzel was a lecturer at Columbia from 1933 to 1935 and from 1937 to 1940. It was not until 1953 that she was hired as an adjunct professor at Columbia. This subseries is organized into the following groupings maintained by Bunzel: student correspondence, general administrative materials, and materials relating to the courses she taught. Folders containing her student correspondence consist of letters to and from her students as well as letters of recommendations she wrote for her students. These folders are arranged chronologically by academic year while the letters within the folders are organized alphabetically by student name. The administrative folders contain her official letters of appointment from Columbia, correspondence with her colleagues at the university, and university and departmental memos. There are also two folders of materials that Bunzel collected on the 1968 student strikes at Columbia University. Both the folders and the materials within the folders are arranged chronologically. Folders relating to the courses Bunzel taught are arranged alphabetically. While there are lecture notes for her earlier classes, the folders for the courses she taught in her later years mostly contain student papers. There are also several more folders containing student papers from different courses mixed together; these papers are arranged alphabetically by student. At the end of the series are student information sheets that she had her students complete. Among her notable students whose correspondence and work can be found in this series are Vincent Crapanzano, Ethel Cutler Freeman, Miriam Kaprow (ethnographer and sister of artist Allan Kaprow), and Roy A. Rappaport. Documents containing student grades have been restricted until 2030.

More of Bunzel's notes for the courses she taught can be found in Series 7. Card files. Materials relating to her participation in the University Seminars at Columbia can be found in Series 5. Associations, Conferences, and Seminars.

SERIES 5: ASSOCIATIONS, CONFERENCES, & SEMINARS. 1940-1973.

5 inches

This series contains materials relating to Bunzel's participation in associations, conferences, and seminars. Folders are organized alphabetically. Among the materials in the series are marked ballots for AAA & AES elections, papers she presented at conferences, and notes and other items from seminars she attended. Of special interest in this series are Bunzel's handwritten notes regarding Abram Kardiner's psychocultural seminars in which she was a participant. The series also contains materials from the University Seminars at Columbia University, particularly the University Seminar on Content and Methods in the Social Sciences.

More of her notes from seminars can be found in Series 7. Card Files.

2.8 linear feet

This series consists of card files containing bibliographic information and notes on different anthropological topics such as culture and personality and Native Americans. Boxes 23 and 24 contain notes for classes she taught, notes from seminars she attended, and notes on readings. Bunzel's address card file of colleagues is also in this series and can be found in Box 20. Oversized notes in Boxes 23 and 24 have been separated and placed at the end of Box 19.

SERIES 8. ARTWORK. CIRCA 1930s.

2 linear feet

This series contains watercolor, crayon, and ink drawings of Hopi and Zuni kachinas that Bunzel collected during her fieldwork in the Southwest. Most of the drawings were already numbered and are thus arranged in numerical order. The drawings in Box 26, most of which have numbers written on the front and back, are arranged according to the numbers on the back.

The drawings in Box 25 were originally stored in a manila envelope with “Zuni Kachinas (Spiers – Parsons)” written on the front. A photocopy of the envelope along with a handwritten list of different Zuni kachinas can be found in the box. The drawings in Box 25 are all of Zuni kachinas and appear to have been drawn by one artist. The Zuni names as well as their common names and possibly Hopi names are written on the back of the drawings.

Box 26 contains drawings of Hopi kachinas mixed with a few of Zuni kachinas. These drawings appear to have been drawn at a later date than the drawings in Box 25. The drawings also appear to have been by 4 or 5 different artists with a few drawings signed by Porter Timeche from Toreva, Arizona. Some of the drawings also have writing on the reverse indicating the name of the kachinas.

SERIES 9. SOUND RECORDINGS. 1963.

There are only two audio reels in this collection. The sound on both reels is faint, but the recordings seem to be of talks given at a regional conference of Anthropology and World Affairs.
